Summary of Legislation

The bill adds definitions for “assistance animal” and “emotional support animal” to the Colorado Anti-Discrimination Act (CADA), and defines “reasonable accommodation” for housing practices included under CADA. The bill specifies other conditions related to assessing reasonable accommodations in housing and prohibiting unfair or discriminatory housing practices against individuals with disabilities.

Assessment of No Fiscal Impact

The definitions codified in this bill had until recently been part of federal guidance that the state complied with. The procedural and administrative infrastructure to assist persons with housing accommodations is already in place across state and local government housing programs. The bill thus codifies existing practice and clarifies authority that is already being implemented. For these reasons, the bill is assessed as having no fiscal impact.

Effective Date

The bill takes effect upon signature of the Governor, or upon becoming law without his signature.
