involuntary servitude, except as punishment for a crime of which a person has been duly convicted. The concurrent resolution removes this exception to the prohibition, and clarifies in a nonconstitutional legislative declaration that the intent of that amendment is not to disallow opportunities for persons convicted of crimes to work.

1           WHEREAS, Involuntary servitude, which is the coerced service 2 of one person for the benefit of another, has been prohibited by the 3 Colorado constitution since 1877; and

4           WHEREAS, That prohibition has, by its express terms, never been 5 applied when involuntary servitude is imposed upon a person as 6 punishment for a crime of which he or she has been duly convicted; and

7           WHEREAS, The state should not have the ability to compel 8 persons to labor against their will; and

9           WHEREAS, The state recognizes that allowing persons convicted 10 of a crime to perform work incident to such convictions, including labor 11 at penal institutions or pursuant to work-release programs, assists in such 12 persons' rehabilitations, teaches practical and interpersonal skills that may 13 be useful upon their reintegration with society, and contributes to 14 healthier and safer penal environments; and

15           WHEREAS, Because work provides myriad individual and 16 collective benefits, it is not the intent to withdraw legitimate opportunities 17 for persons convicted of a crime to work, but merely to prevent 18 compulsory labor from such persons; now, therefore,
