Summary of Legislation

This bill establishes a legal privilege for certain communications between a disabled person (client) and a disability advocate retained by the client. Under the bill, protected communications must directly relate to providing effective communication support accommodation, as defined in federal law. The advocate must undergo a minimum of eight hours of specialized training per year and may not release protected communications without first obtaining permission from the client.

State Expenditures

To the extent that this bill results in additional motions for the court to determine the purpose of communication between advocates and their clients, workload may increase in the Judicial Department by a minimal amount. No additional appropriations are required for the Judicial Department.

Effective Date

The bill was postponed indefinitely by the House Judiciary Committee on April 21, 2016.
