The bill would have prevented local governments from imposing restrictions on the use of fenced security alarm systems and battery-charged fences. It may have impacted local government workload and revenue on an ongoing basis.

Appropriation Summary: No appropriation was required.

Fiscal Note Status: The final fiscal note reflects the introduced bill. This bill was postponed indefinitely by the Senate Local Government and Housing Committee on February 29, 2024; therefore, the impacts identified in this analysis do not take effect.

Summary of Legislation

The bill prohibits local governments from enforcing an ordinance, resolution, or building code that imposes restrictions on the use of a fenced perimeter security alarm system, except in an area that is zoned exclusively for residential use. The bill also prohibits local governments from regulating the use of a battery-charged fence, though the local government may still inspect the fence to verify it has the required characteristics of a battery-charged fence.

Local Government

The bill may increase workload for local governments that need to rewrite land use or building codes to comply with the bill's requirements. If a local government has a permitting process for fenced perimeter security alarm systems, by eliminating the permitting process the bill may decrease revenue and workload for the government. Any impact is expected to be minimal.

Effective Date

The bill takes effect 90 days following adjournment of the General Assembly sine die, assuming no referendum petition is filed.
