Summary of Legislation

This bill adds human trafficking of a minor for involuntary or sexual servitude to the definition of "abuse" or "child abuse or neglect" for dependency and neglect cases. It requires county departments of human or social services to offer services immediately to any child reported to be a victim of trafficking and allows county departments to file a petition in juvenile court on behalf of the child. County departments must inform local law enforcement if investigators believe the child or other children require protection, and in these cases county departments may place the child or children in protective custody. Finally, the bill requires the Department of Human Services and county departments to implement a uniform screening tool for identifying children who are victims, or are at risk of becoming victims, of human trafficking.

Background

Under current law, county departments respond to reports of child abuse and neglect within families and may provide services to promote the well being and safety of the child. Law enforcement may respond to reports of child abuse or neglect within a family or involving third parties, as part of a criminal investigation or to respond to an urgent situation.

State Expenditures

This bill increases workload in the Department of Human Services to oversee, train, and support county departments investigating human trafficking of minors as well as to implement the uniform screening tool. The fiscal note assumes that this increase can be accomplished within existing appropriations. Should the department find that workload exceeds existing capacity, the fiscal note assumes that the department will address this through the annual budget process.

The bill may increase workload in trial courts and in the Office of the Child's Representative within the Judicial Department. However, it is assumed that most dependency and neglect cases where children have been trafficked are already being filed and that the bill will result in only a minimal number of additional filings, if any. The fiscal note assumes any increase in workload can be absorbed within existing appropriations.

Local Government Impact

This bill increases workload for county departments of human and social services, which are required immediately to provide services to children reported to be victims of human trafficking and to implement a uniform screening tool to identify victims of trafficking. The precise impact to local governments has not been estimated.

Effective Date

The bill takes effect August 10, 2016, if the General Assembly adjourns on May 11, 2016, as scheduled, and no referendum petition is filed.
